Composting 101: Help the Environment and Your Yard

By Susan Walker

Have you ever thought about composting – taking leaves, grass and kitchen scraps and turning them into humus-rich soil through aerobic decomposition? Autumn, with all of the fallen leaves, is the perfect time to start. Reasons to compost are: 1) One third of all landfill waste is compostable materials. 2) Compost improves the soil in our yards and gardens. 3) It is good for the environment as it decreases methane gas emissions from landfills and is an alternative to chemical fertilizers that pollute waterways.

Walk through the inner pathways and you will notice that GHI members are already composting in our community. Becky French of 14 Ridge Court has been composting all her life. I asked Becky and her husband, Ben Fischler, for advice on how to start composting.

1. Start with bare ground, laying twigs, sticks and small branches first – this allows the compost to get oxygen, one of the ingredients needed for composting.
2. Layer brown/dry materials like leaves (shredded is best otherwise they mat together and do not decompose), newspaper (also shredded; no glossy or colored inks), shredded paper, and prunings from shrubs (don’t include any diseased plants or weeds with seeds).
3. Layer green/wet materials like kitchen scraps, coffee grounds/filters, tea bags and crushed eggshells. Grass clippings are excellent, but must be in thin layers so they do not mat into clumps. Avoid adding pet waste, meat, fish, dairy products, fats, plastic, Styrofoam or treated wood.
4. End with a brown layer to minimize any odor. Also, adding mulch from Northway Fields or soil from your garden to the top will mask any odors and accelerate the composting process. If your compost has an odor then turn it to add air and also add more brown materials.
5. The rule of thumb according to http://eartheasy.com/grow_compost.html is one third green to two-thirds brown materials (by volume).
6. GHI requires an enclosed bin and that helps retain heat and moisture. GHI also requires bins to be screened.
7. When adding new material, mix or turn them so that you are aerating the material.

If you start your composting now, Becky and Ben say that you can have good humus for the spring when you start your garden! Composting is easy she says, but it does take time for nature to work.

Don’t want to compost by yourself? Members in 60 court Crescent share one compost bin. Consider starting one with neighbors in your court. You can read more about composting at the library or on the Web at places like www.greenbeltmd.gov/documentcenter/view/568. You can build your own compost bin or purchase one at local hardware stores or online. Luisa Robles, a GHI member and the city’s recycling coordinator, can also answer questions at 240-542-2153.

The important thing is: Just do it!
Three Cheers for Recent Member Events

Recently our own Member Outreach Committee has been a non-stop cheering squad for GHI members, supporting events and reminding us about what a great community we live in.

In September, the committee sponsored the Garden Tour with the Greenbelt Gardeners Yahoo group. There were 15 homes on the tour, 13 of which were in GHI. Over 100 people participated in the tour. Next the committee sponsored the GHI Yard Sale and Plant Swap. Deals could be found on a used baby stroller, clothing for all ages, camping equipment, etc. Proceeds from the sale were used toward the member picnic. The first annual Plant Swap provided members with an easy way to get new plants, bushes, seeds and other garden accessories for free, but the best bargain was the sharing of useful tips on gardening in GHI while people were waiting in line for the event to begin.

On the first weekend of October, the committee was at it again supporting the annual GHI Member Picnic. What a great day for a picnic! Great food, great moon bounce and great company! I introduced myself to Doug, one of our newest members who joined GHI in September. Doug had played the Timpani in the Syracuse Symphony for 34 years and was excited to be in a warmer climate and happy to be in GHI close to many cultural events. Next I shared a table with Sterling, a veteran and a GHI member since 1959, who has been to the picnics for the last 10 years because he enjoys talking to other people.

Let’s cheer our Member Outreach Committee and think about ways we can all contribute to our community. Check out all of GHI’s committees at http://www.ghi.coop/content/committees and consider volunteering your talents to your co-op!
